Who Am I?

- My name is Mounir; I was born in Morocco and I live in Spain. Who knows what the future holds, which is why I like to say that I'm a citizen of the world – that's the most accurate way to put it.

The "zoc" and the market of Bonn

What My Photo Means

The market, also known as a 'zoc' in the Maghreb. It is interesting to note how it has become part of Western society, just like many other things invented in the Maghreb. Ingenuity is something shared by all human beings. However, we adopt what interests us, focus on it and take the best aspects for ourselves without taking the people into account. There are far more things that unite us than divide us. The bond between people, exchange, society... I wish integration would take into account every effort made by every person throughout history to get us to where we are now, without belittling or marginalising anyone.
