What My Photo Means

Pharoon been here more years then my age in Germany. He is from Sudan and he owns business here as he said.

As an Sudanese man here at Germany and walking around with his bike and being nice to meet him and open for sharing with us his presence gives me hope for what we accomplish as migrants coming to Europe and for the next generation.

In this opportunity of going out at Bonn to find people or things to express the matter of migrations puts you to think how the reality is and get you closer to communicate the positives and negatives of what we experience as humans.

It is always the little things that connect us to the bigger picture.
It can be a word or a conversation that always leads to fit in the puzzle.
